“There are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea”

Henry James (Author)

Afternoon Tea; that most English of customs is actually a relatively new tradition. The act of tea drinking first dates to China in the third millennium BC. King Charles II and his wife Catherine de Braganza first made tea drinking popular during the 1660's. It was not until the mid 17th Century that the concept of afternoon tea first appeared.

The Duchess of Bedford introduced afternoon tea to England in 1840, asking for a tray of tea, bread and butter and cake to be brought to her room in the late afternoon. This soon became normal practice, with friends often invited to join her. The idea soon caught on in fashionable circles during the 1880's with society women changing into long gowns, gloves and hats for the occasion, with their afternoon tea usually being served in the drawing room between four and five o'clock.

Traditional afternoon tea includes a selection of dainty sandwiches, scones served with clotted cream and preserves, alongside cakes with either India or Ceylon tea.

The 1985 Fonseca is still youthful. The nose offers kirsch, sloes and Christmas cake. With time, there are subtle notes of dried fig and dates beginning to emerge and add to the complexity. The palate is medium-bodied and beautifully balanced on the supple, rounded entry. It is not quite as complex as the aromatics, with dates and dried fig, the finish mellow and refined. It is very elegant for a Fonseca, weighty but supremely well focused. A fabulous Fonseca ready to drink now, but will age for another 30 or 40 years.
